

Allison Ashe Bio:

Allison Ashe came to Wellroot Family Services in 2020 as a proven nonprofit leader, communicator, and fundraising professional to lead the organization in launching a bold, new strategic plan. Allison has significant experience in youth and family programs, working with youth transitioning out of foster care, and independent living. She has expertise in the impact of trauma and generational poverty. Known for team-building, creativity, and mission focus, Allison led Covenant House Georgia for nine years and grew their capacity to serve youth experiencing homelessness by 400%. Allison enjoys working collaboratively with staff, state, corporate and individual donors, board members, and volunteers.

Since coming to Wellroot, Allison and her team launched a prevention services division with evidenced-based programs designed to keep children out of care. Allison serves on the board of the United Methodist Association and the Safe Harbor for Sexually Exploited Children Commission. Allison is a member of the Leadership Atlanta class of 2017.

A person of faith, Allison earned a Master's degree from Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary and has served in chaplaincy roles. Allison gravitated to nonprofit service as a manifestation of her commitment to Christ. Allison is a member of Mt. Pisgah United Methodist Church. Allison resides in Johns Creek with her husband Paul and three children; Sophia, Miles, and Scarlett.
